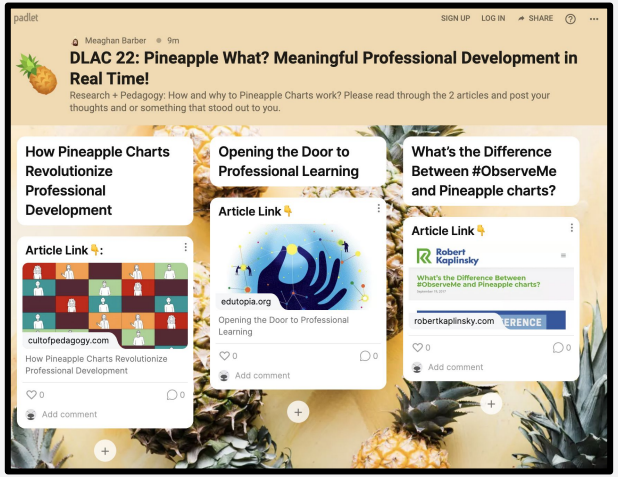
What the Pineapple?!

Research + Pedagogy

[How Pineapple Charts Revolutionize Professional Development]

[Opening the Door to Professional Learning]

[What's the Difference Between #ObserveMe and Pineapple charts?]



National Standards For Quality (NSQ)

A2 The online teacher is a reflective practitioner.

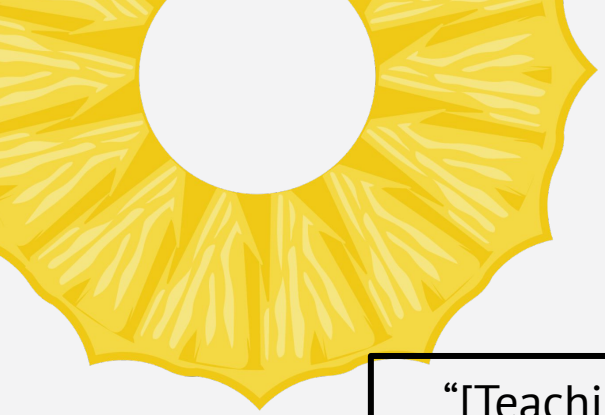
“The online teacher is a reflective practitioner who continues to focus on his or her practice and finds opportunities for growth.”

EXAMPLES: “The online teacher seeks out colleagues for feedback/suggestions on areas of practice that, after reflection, show room for growth.”

A3 The online teacher continuously pursues knowledge and skills related to online learning and pedagogy.

“The online teacher understands the importance of staying up to date in best practices in his or her ever-evolving field.”
“The online teacher identifies areas for professional growth and seeks learning opportunities both independently and through professional learning groups/communities.”

EXAMPLES: “Annual evaluations of the online teacher show growth in meeting professional goals.
The online teacher has evidence of professional development and/or has evidence of meeting individual professional growth plan goals.



“[Teaching is a profession… where learning is most meaningful when observed in real time. Synchronous observations open the door for you to communicate with your fellow educators, improving instruction through affirming practices].”

Examples of Feedback

Grow 🌱

"I love that they weren't afraid to present to each other. Maybe you could have a structured way to give each other feedback?"

Glow 🌟

"Matt your chill is calming! I am obsessed with how you start your class with this interactive SEL check-in. I love how the kids are able to chime in and tell everyone how they are feeling. The one student who said she had Taco Tuesday and was excited for leftovers 🌮hilarious!"

Grow 🌱

"It would be so cool to let your students come up with the options for 1/2/3/4! I would love to see the pictures or gifs that they find! Thanks for sharing!"
